Dr. William George Brown, retired professor of chemistry, in the University of Missouri, died suddenly of heart disease at his home at 815 Virginia avenue at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning after a slight illness of several days. A short funeral service will be held at the home at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow. The body will be taken to the Wabash depot immediately afterward and will be sent to Lexington, Va., for burial.

Doctor Brown is survived by his wife, and one daughter, Mary Louise. It is thought by friends of the family that Doctor Brown's death was hastened by his grief over the death of his two sons, Clifford, who was recently killed in an accident in St. Louis, and George, who died less than two years ago. The bodies of the two sons will later be taken to Virginia where the family will make their home.

Doctor Brown was born at New-castle-on-Tyne, England, on November 5, 1853, the son of William Robert Brown and Jane Gillie Sanderson. He moved with his parents to Virginia, in July, 1869. He entered the University of Virginia and was a Miller scholar there in 1875, receiving his B. S. degree two years later. In 1884 he was a Morgan fellow at Harvard after having previously spent a year studying in the University of Heidelberg, Germany. He was given the degree of doctor of philosophy by the University of North Carolina in 1889.

In 1895 he was married to Miss Isabelle White, of Lexington, Va. Taught in Several Schools. Before coming to Columbia, Doctor Brown was professor of chemistry in the University of Tennessee, from '79 to '83. He also taught in the University of Virginia, the South Carolina Military Academy and in the Washington and Lee University at Lynchburg, Va. From 1894 to 1896 he was chemist in the United States Department of Agriculture.

Doctor Brown was connected with the University of Missouri from 1896 until 1919 as professor of chemistry, and was for years head of the department of chemistry.

He was director of laboratories in the University for fourteen years. He was a member of numerous honorary and professional societies in this country and abroad. His research work enabled him to contribute technical words of importance to the English language. From 1904 to 1911 he was editor of the University of Missouri studies and he also wrote articles for scientific and other periodicals from time to time.

Classes to Be Suspended. All University classes will be suspended between 12 and 2 o'clock tomorrow in honor of the memory of Doctor Brown. The faculty will meet at 12 in the office of the secretary and then go in a body to the residence for the funeral and then to the Wabash station.

How a photograph of the Rev. Edward Standard of Ames, Mass., late chaplain in the United States Army, secured an honorable discharge and award of compensation for James D. Laignor, vocational student in the University, is told in a letter to Laignor from the U. S. Treasury Department.

Laignor was wounded in one shoulder October 12, 1918, while advancing with his company in the Argonne. He was carried off the battle field by Mr. Standard and after treatment in several hospitals finally reached the United States.

Meanwhile all his records had been lost, and the War Department, having no adequate information regarding his service, withheld his discharge and award of compensation. In vain, Laignor tried to remember the name of the chaplain.

Finally his buddy, Robert Taylor of Wellington, Kan., sent Laignor a letter, inclosing the photograph of the chaplain with the letter's signature. The rest proved easy. Though there was no address on the photograph, the War Department was enabled, through its service files, to locate Mr. Standard, who had also been wounded, and who was in a hospital. The latter substantiated Laignor's claims and thus made it possible for him to get his discharge and award of compensation for disability.

Mr. Laignor served with the Forty-third U. S. Engineers, and was attached to the Twenty-sixth Division when wounded. He has been operated on twice since then, the last operation being successful. Before entering the army Mr. Laignor worked as cartoonist for the Kansas City Post for several years. He was forced to give up his vocation because of the injury to his right arm.

He is now taking a course in Journalism at the University under the direction of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

GAS NOW 28 1/2 CENTS A GALLON

Shipping Conditions, Not Scarcity, Are Trouble Says Dealer.

Gas has climbed to 28 1/2 cents. Some local consumers see in the advanced price, the deteriorated quality and the decreased quantity a cause for alarm. Foremost, so they think, suggests a government plan of conservation—some such method as a forced economy through tests to be applied to the performance of all makes of automobiles together with an investigation of carburetors and fuel.

Local dealers in gas, however, see no cause for concern in the exhaustion of supply, and, consequently, no necessity for legislation.

L. T. Cook, proprietor of the Ninth Street Garage, predicts that the rise in price is temporary and that in Columbia, as in other places, the price will drop. Shipping conditions rather than scarcity of supply, he thinks, is at the bottom of the trouble.

He also says that while an investigation of fuel and carburetors might help the situation, more could be done through care on the part of drivers. Gas contains more oil than it formerly did, said Mr. Cook, and cannot be used without waste with an old make of carburetor; but with the up-to-date carburetor, designed especially for the heavier gas, there can be little waste. Experiments are being made in certain laboratories to produce a gas that contains a larger per cent of oil as economical as any quality produced in the past. The increase of oil does not mean less power or less mileage a gallon.
